Carols Corner Changing the World One story at a Time

For June, we are continuously surrounded by displays of courage.

Courage - it is a word that strikes an immediate chord in our minds as we encounter so many instances of it in our daily lives. Courageous acts during extreme weather events, rescues from impossible situations to save people's lives, soldiers fighting wars to protect us, and people racing to help those in need. We have just remembered as we do each year, the men and women who sacrificed their lives to save our country in times of war and even our own law enforcements are at risk many times as they do their duty. Yes, courage, it is one of the greatest assets of the human race. But there is another type of courage, which surrounds us, and it is also one we could acknowledge more, and that is the courage borne quietly and bravely by ordinary people as they go about their lives. The people facing severe illness with fortitude and tact, and those who have lost so much of their past, but keep going with cheerfulness and determination to live a normal and happy life. A wonderful quote was written some time ago, which to me describes this perfectly. "Courage does not always roar. Sometimes courage is the little voice at the end of the day, saying 'I shall try again tomorrow' ".
Carol Pearce.
